Jamie Kirkland's landscapes are deeply poetic meditations focused on fleeting moments. She is using paint in an additive and reductive process to translate the forms of landscape into her own story of lyrical mystery and calm. Her work is found in many prominent collections throughout the US.

Jamie Kirkland

"Even though I have lived in the desert Southwest for the past 15 years, I am still taken aback by the 360-degree view, the low horizon line, and the enormous sky space that permeates every aspect of life. IN THE LINEUP focuses on a more intimate view of the San Luis Valley on the western slope of the Sangre de Cristo Mountains in Colorado. The trees, often cottonwoods that line the creeks in glorious ribbons from the valley floor to the mountaintops, are eye-catching because vegetation is so sparse. Seeing a cluster of trees like this in the desert can inspire one to imagine their personalities and characters, surviving and thriving in such a harsh environment. IN THE LINEUP is a celebration of that."
